

FOUND WILDLIFE?

Found injured or orphaned wildlife?

Read our FAQs on our website to find out your next steps. Examples are:

- > I saw a baby wild animal, what should I do?
- > I found a mammal, what do I do?
- > I found a baby bird that can't fly, what now?

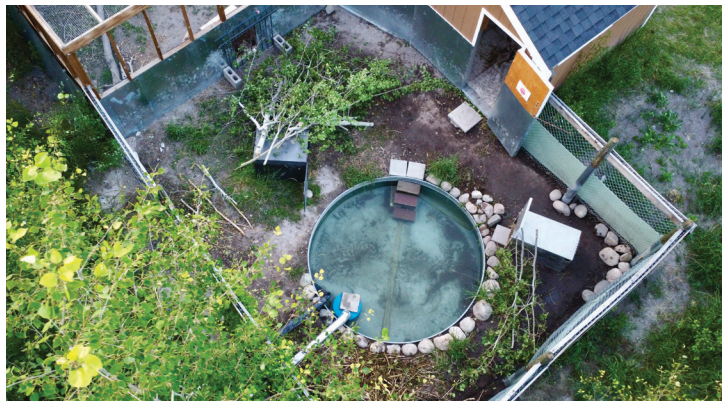

Still have questions?

- > Email us at info@interiorwildlife.ca
- > Include your location and add a picture
- > Wait for confirmation before you drop off at one of our partner locations

Note: We have housing and resources to care for native small mammals, reptiles and aquatic birds. No direct drop-offs.

For other wildlife inquiries:

INTERIOR WILDLIFE REHABILITATION SOCIETY

IWRS operates the first government licensed wildlife rehabilitation centre servicing the Okanagan and Shuswap areas.

The Interior Wildlife Rehabilitation Society (IWRS) has been established in 2020. We are joining forces with other privately funded centres to rehabilitate injured and orphaned wildlife. We believe in community & education.

Peaceful co-existence of native wildlife with us in our local communities is possible. We are here to answer your wildlife questions and to connect people with the same goal.

We are not open to the public, however you can become a member to support our mission and values. Thank you kindly!

OUR GOAL

Rehabilitation Centre

Our wild animal care facility in Summerland, BC, is government-licensed to care for native small mammals, reptiles, and aquatic birds. We provide nursing and medical care to sick, injured, and displaced wild animals and release healthy animals back into their natural habitats. To protect hospitalized animals from stress while recovering, we do not allow visitors at the centre.

Education

We strive to provide education about how to live with wildlife for the public and our volunteers. We also collect data from our patients whenever possible and are expanding our network of collaborators constantly. Our beaver program includes participation in wetland restoration and live webcams in our beaver enclosures.
